MAKE AND GALS ARE SURPRISED BY ANGRY HUSBAND

PHOTOGRAPHS BY VISIT

THE $1000 was paid to keep the matter from the courts and the public. It was also learned that the two women lived in an apartment house near the apartment in which the millionaire had once lived. A year and a half ago Mrs. Paul went to the back Bay house to live, which she had just purchased from her husband at that time. It is said, and has obtained employment as an elevator operator in a New York building. After her coming to Boston she is said to have got the Marine women and the two became friends.

Following the alleged "birthday party" Mrs. Paul is said to have become acquainted with a wealthy young merchant of Boston, who lavished money on her. To an intimate acquaintance Mrs. Paul stated that the merchant wanted to marry her.

She admitted to her friend that it was the apartment which she purchased the huge supply of toys and Christmas presents that she took to North Andover last Christmas to give to her two children who are staying there with her in New York.

It was then that she was refused admittance to the house to see the children and when she returned to Boston she burst into tears. She told her friend that she had been told that she was not to go to the apartment in New York, and that she had been told that she was not to go to the apartment in New York, and that she had been told that she was not to go to the apartment in New York.

'ZER-O' TO ZERO

Applies for Place in Labor Day Line; Free Lunches Served Today

The army of the unemployed received its marching orders today from Commanding Officer, Urban Ladoux.

The orders were issued from the headquarters, otherwise known as the "Poor Man's Club" at No. 31 Howard street, where Ladoux, the mysterious "Mr. Zero," will tomorrow open his free lodging house, with free meals for all.

Ladoux ordered the men who have been subsisting on meals furnished by him through the past week to form in line and march in the Labor Day parade Monday.

Ladoux applied this morning for a place in the line of march, while his lieutenant, Ralph Jones, set a detail to march with him.

The posters will read "The Poor Man's Club" and "The Howard Street Hotel." Ladoux expects to have several hundred men in line Monday, prepared for the parade.

The men who have been practically completely. The poorer force is to be sent out to the kitchen and lunch counter, where soup, beans, and other food will be prepared and served today.

Only one of the men who were with the Red Cross, 33rd Division, and recently with the Little School, the mysterious "Mr. Zero," will tomorrow open his free lodging house, with free meals for all.

The largest crowd that has yet been seen in the free lunch line today over one hundred and fifty men were present today to partake of the last breakfast in regular restaurants. After the meal many of the men were taken up to the free lodging house, where they will be given free meals.

Governor to Holiday at Lawrence With Brothers

Governor Cox picked up his bag of golf sticks this afternoon and set out for Lawrence, where, within forty-eight hours the championship of the Cox family will be fought out.

The Governor was accompanied by his Boston brother, Gay W. Cox. They left for the Lawrence farm of their mother, Jules Louis S. Cox, where they will remain until Monday morning, when the Governor will return to review the Labor Day parade.

In the meantime, books, stencils, and the family champagne.

4 ARE DROWNED IN GREATER BOSTON

Deaths Indirectly Due to Heat Waves of the Past Few Days

Four drownings, due indirectly to the heat waves that had held Boston and the surrounding country in its grip for the past few days, were reported by the police today.

Elizavira Pearson, fifteen years old, son of E. Frank Pearson, No. 44 Commercial Street, was drowned while swimming in Plain Pond, Lynn. He had told companions that he was swimming to "get cooled off," his body was recovered by Lynn patrolmen after they had dived for it several times.

Another case was that of Frank Ryan, dead and dumb, of Wrentham street, Dorchester, who was drowned while swimming in the Neponset river of Commercial Point. His dog today was seen by workmen at the Victory road bridge, but did not reach him too late. He is believed to have been the victim of a heart ailment.

Following a search of several hours the body of 17-year-old John Quinn, who had been missing from his home, was found in the Neponset river, Wrentham, today. It was found in a barrel of water, a short distance from the spot where his clothing was found. It was believed that he had been the victim of a heart ailment.

Why Miss Bronson Went on the Stage

Good Looks, High Moral Standards, But No Experience—Well; Read for Yourself Just What Happened to the Young Girl.

(From September Hearst's)

"GOOD-BY, Mother," Miss Bronson said, a sob rising in her throat.

"Jean—Jean!" the poor woman wailed. "Listen to us—please, please listen to us! Don't you see you are breaking my heart?"

No answer to this appeal was possible, and Jean attempted none. She had but one thought—to escape from the present situation as quickly as possible. After that, she did not know what she would do, but now, the way to freedom lay open. With tears starting to her eyes, she stumbled from the room, down the stairs, out into the street.

For a while Jean walked on in complete abstraction. Then suddenly she began to take account of her problems. In the first place she was quite without wardrobe, barring the clothes in which she stood. In the second, she was equally without a home. Both defects would have to be remedied before nightfall.

A brisk walk down the avenue, an appetizing luncheon, brought Jean to a more equable frame of mind. After all, she had done what she felt to be her duty, at considerable cost to herself, and whether others appreciated it or not made very little difference. So she put the past resolutely behind her, and thought of the future.

After getting lunch she bought some toilet necessities and, democratically carrying them with her, sought her friend, Miss Goddard, the actress, a slender blonde woman of thirty, with an intellectual face.

"I may try musical comedy," Jean confided eagerly to Miss Goddard on their way downtown. "I know a girl in one of the Broadway shows."

"Good Looks—But No Experience"

"Can you sing?" Miss Goddard asked.

"A little," said Jean. "I haven't a big voice, but my teacher says the quality is good."

"H'm. Dance? Stage dancing, I mean, not the ballroom kind."

"No. But I think I could learn."

"Any stage experience at all—amateur theatricals, or the like?"

"My people don't believe in such things," Jean said. "They're very strict—religious."

Miss Goddard turned and gazed at her companion critically.

"All you have, then, is a good face and figure. You'll find the supply exceeds the demand."

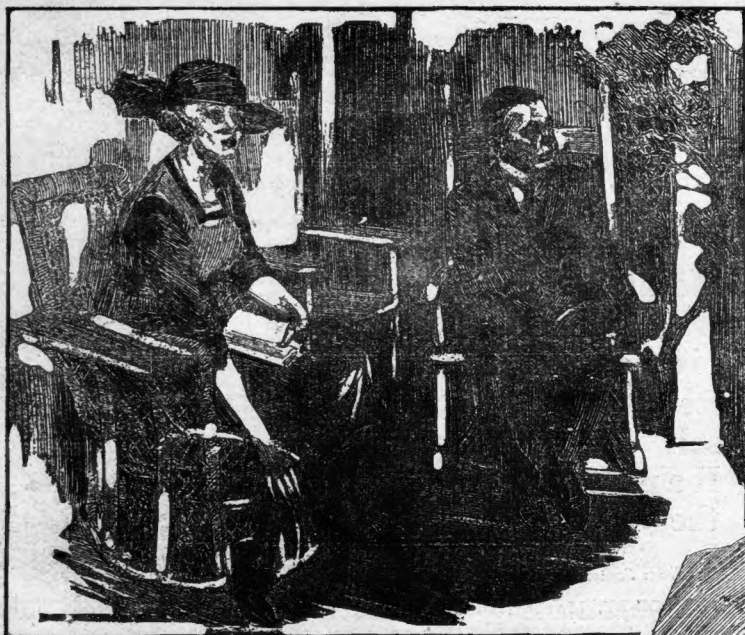

"But," Jean objected, "I've heard of lots of girls who went into musical shows without any experience."

"Stage experience—yes," Miss Goddard remarked, with a crooked smile. "No doubt most of them had had other kinds."

"What do you mean?" asked Jean, innocently.

"My dear girl, you'll find out soon enough. Good-looking girls who can sing and dance are always in demand, for musical shows. They get as high as forty or even fifty dollars a week, too. But if you have nothing but your looks to offer, you'll find it hard sledding, unless of course you have someone interested in you—manager, author, composer, stage director—someone who will get behind you and push.

"Don't let me discourage you, though. You may be the exception that proves the rule. You've stunning hair and you're slender as a young sapling. They like 'em that way. You might work that old society-girl gag. It's generally good press-agent stuff to have one of the four hundred, or near four hundred, in the cast. That's about your best bet, I should say."

"But I didn't intend to use my real name," Jean objected. "My people would be horrified. They'd stop at nothing to prevent such a disgrace. My grandfather, Joshua Carrington, thinks the theatre an invention of the devil."

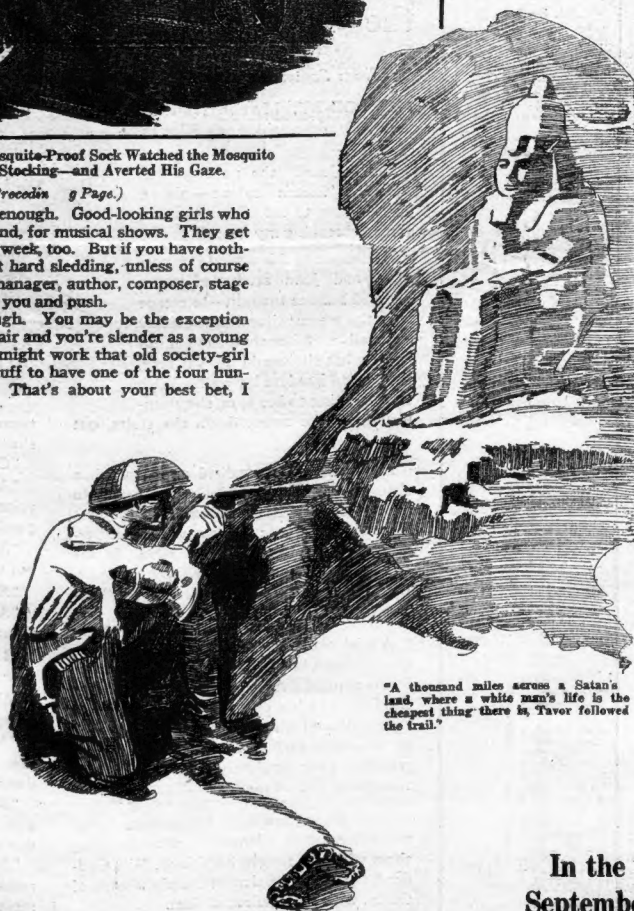

"Really!" Miss Goddard's eyes were calculating. "Then I should say you had a very splendid chance to make good. Go into a musical show, under your own name, and the bigger howl he puts up the more it will advertise the show. If he would only try to kidnap you or have you dragged off the stage in the middle of a performance your fortune would be made."

"But I don't want to make it that way. I want to win by hard work—merit."

Miss Goddard broke into peals of laughter.

"Don't be a fool, my dear," she said. "Hard work—merit—on the musical-comedy stage! There ain't no such animal. Run away with a millionaire schoolboy, murder your husband, ride up Broadway on a

THIS IS NOT THE GARDEN OF EDEN! The Boston American's swimwear just happened by this rock when suddenly these hair tresses appeared, clearly warning the poor chap to death. He thought they were wild women. However, these were Pampas girls sent far from being aboriginal. They were merely posing themselves in their smart one-piece bathing suits. Spunking of the Boston American's content will be returned. Watch for more of another spotted scene this month. (K.)

South Boston Congressman
Promises to Smash "Eyes-tem" if Elected

Congressman James A. Gallivan has formally announced his candidacy for Mayor. The action of the South Boston leader to expose former Mayor James M. Curley and the candidates picked by the Good Government Association, promises to make the coming election a bitterly fought contest. Gallivan, four years ago, in the three-cornered fight between himself, Mayor Patrick and Curley won third place, polling less votes than Curley.

Gallivan has authorized the following statement:

"It is my present intention to go to the polls as a candidate in the coming mayoralty contest. I feel that my public record entitles me to more consideration than should be accorded candidates who have either been expelled from public office or have been twice re-elected."

"The political make-up of Boston in municipal affairs is most peculiar. Unfortunately no contest for the Mayoralty can be conducted upon the basis of personal merit as demonstrated in public life, but illuminating experience of four years ago proves this conclusively. I shall not again ascribe either myself or my loyal friends in a hostile and unjust manner to this absurd system."

I mention the people one of two things, either that my candidacy, now shrouded in fog, shall induce a change in the political make-up of the city, or else I shall smash the system. Either outcome will be a victory for me because in either case I know that the people are ready to do as they please."
